NEW QUESTION: 2

Growth companies are:

- A. all of these answers.
- B. companies that have management abilities and investment opportunities that yield rates of return higher than the required rate of return.
- C. companies that have consistently above-average sales and earnings.
- D. companies whose shares generate returns higher than stocks with similar risks.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

Growth companies need not have stocks that generate higher than required rates of return. They have rates of return on their investments which are higher than that required by the risks in the investments since the market impounds all available information in the stock price. Further, growth companies are measured in terms of the growth and not the level of sales and earnings.
