NEW QUESTION: 3
All of these are fundamental building blocks of differentiated services Traffic Conditioner Block except which one?
A. dropper
B. meter
C. querier
D. shaper
E. marker
F. classifier
Answer: C
Explanation:
Differentiated Services Components The following components make up the foundation of a Cisco Differentiated Services implementation: Traffic conditioning (traffic policing and traffic shaping)Traffic conditioning is performed at the edges of a DiffServ domain. Traffic conditioners perform traffic shaping and policing functions to ensure that traffic entering the DiffServ domain conforms to the rules specified by the Traffic Conditioning Agreement (TCA) and complies with the service provisioning policy of the domain. Traffic conditioning may range from simple code point remarking to complex policing and shaping operations. Packet classification - Packet classification uses a traffic descriptor (for example, the DSCP) to categorize a packet within a specific group in order to define that packet. After the packet has been defined (that is, classified), the packet is accessible for QoS handling on the network. Using packet classification, you can partition network traffic into multiple priority levels or classes of service. When traffic descriptors are used to classify traffic, the source agrees to adhere to the contracted terms and the network promises a QoS. Traffic policers and traffic shapers use the traffic descriptor of the packet (that is, the classification of the packet) to ensure adherence to that agreement.
Packet marking - Packet marking is related to packet classification. Packet marking allows you to classify a packet based on a specific traffic descriptor (such as the DSCP value). This classification can then be used to apply user-defined differentiated services to the packet and to associate a packet with a local QoS group. Associating a packet with a local QoS group allows users to associate a group ID with a packet. The group ID can be used to classify packets into QoS groups based on prefix, autonomous system, and community string. A user can set up to 64 DSCP values and 100 QoS group markings. Congestion management - Congestion management (or scheduling) is achieved through traffic scheduling and traffic queueing. When there is network congestion, a scheduling mechanism such as CBWFQ is used to provide guaranteed bandwidth to the different classes of traffic. Congestion avoidance - Congestion avoidance techniques monitor network traffic loads in an effort to anticipate and avoid congestion at common network bottlenecks. Congestion avoidance is achieved through packet dropping. Among the more commonly used congestion avoidance mechanisms is WRED. With WRED and Differentiated Services, you have the option of allowing WRED to use the DSCP value when WRED calculates the drop probability of a packet.
